Perry-wide:
layer those long lashes

The K-PEZ eyelift

WHEN a single line of extensions isn't crowd-wowing enough, break out the ultimate optical illusion: the triple-stack lash. We're talking full-body lush plus anti-gravity boing – hi-def eye-lift! It's a Katy Perry (and Eva Longoria) trademark. "Curl your lashes, then upload your full strip of glamour-falsies," instructs Charlotte, who's used the trick on Jen Hawkins and Danni Minogue. "Now take a half strip and trim so it just focuses in the centre points of each lash line; the density gives you heavyweight wattage while lighter end-lashes spring up to exaggerate an upward curve." Super-size it by pushing your inkiest black mascara deep into your lash base. "My trick is to touch just the tips of long lashes with burgundy; it's subtle yet lens-grabby on any eye colour," she says.

Curl 'em and stack 'em

3D lips

REVIVING up red lip to award-ceremonial! An on-camera tip from Marion: make it multi-dimensional. Clashing textures and shades turn a power-rich colour all pillow under spotlights. Step one: exfoliate and prep with a clear, non-waxy plumper. "Now apply a vibrant orange-red matte pigment all over; then trace a fat line on the perimeters of your lips with a cherry-red liner," directs Charlotte. "Blend the colours with a brush, then top it with two glosses: pigment-soaked high-intensity orange for depth, then glossy red to bounce light."
