MINIMALIST GOES MAX

Put this perfect nude lip palette on multi-duties: "Backstage, I tap the creme shade onto the backbone of the cheekbone for subtle contour and press the setting powder across eyelids for instant definition," says Napoleon

THINNER SKIN

Buzzwords surrounding the latest foundations might be "air-light" and "invisible"...but (exhale!) that doesn't mean skimpier coverage. Built with micro-sized pigments that blur blemishes and fine lines by reflecting light, the new breed of mousse and water-base formulas will have you pulling off flawless — no heavy layering required.

Lighten your load

To make lightweight work harder, get hands-on! "Before applying makeup, massaging your face with gentle, uplifting strokes wakes up circulation, plumping skin into a smoother canvas," instructs makeup guru Napoleon Perdis (the man behind the radiance at Tom Maticevski's runway this week). "Then the warmth of working foundation in with your fingers will melt the product into your skin seamlessly."

LASH-LITES

The A/W runways worked hard to wean us off major mascara, with Alexander Wang, Chloé and Proenza Schouler all showing the simple oh-so prettiness of a skinny lash. Call us convinced! Copycat this eye-opening trick from backstage pro Tom Pecheux: define top lashes with a single coat of smooth black, then switch to natural brown to barely touch the bottom set. Undetectable, yet eye-mazing...

One-coat wonders

For cleaner, leaner definition, work a slimline silicone wand. "Push your lash up with a fingertip and load mascara into your lash bed to outline your eye, then twist your wrist backward as you smooth it up in one sweep," says Michael.

WEIGHT-FREE CURL

Taking on the naked lash à la Hervé Léger? Try the triple-clamp technique with your curler: one gentle squeeze each at your roots, mid-lash then near the tips. Wink, wink...
