How to:

They say life's too short – so why not chop your mop! We're absolutely loving Generation Crop, and it's easy to see just how versatile this pretty pixie look is with Emma Watson and Ashlee Simpson joining the just-cropped ranks. It's better suited to small and petite face shapes, and short hair looks best when styled with texture.

To recreate this look, start with Avon Root

Booster. "Apply it to the roots of the hair and lightly massage in," explains Lesley Cameron, hair and make-up artist for Avon. "Blowdry using your fingers to give extra volume around the crown of the head. Next, work a texture paste or matte putty through the palms of your hands. The heat from your hands warms the product making it pliable. Rub it through your hair – the more random, the better."

Make-up to match your mane

Pair your pixie crop with pretty peepers. Short hair accentuates the face so put yourself in the spotlight with liquid-liner cat eyes.

"The key to getting liquid liner flicks is in the application," explains Lesley. Copy Carey Mulligan's look by applying mascara first, then take your liquid eyeliner, rest your elbow on a hard surface, and pull your closed eyelid until it's taut. Start from the inner rim and slowly line the top of the lid evenly. To add the cat-eye look, apply more liner from the middle working out to the outer edge. Now, taking your eyeliner, find a point that is parallel to the end of your eyebrow, make a dot and, starting from there, work your way inwards for the perfect flick." Et voila!
