With everyone from JLaw, Michelle Williams, ScarJo, Tay Tay and Karlie Kloss sporting shorter dos over the past few months, heading to the salon for a cut is a thought that's definitely making its way into our collective consciousness. The urge to make a fresh start with a chic new style is common, especially as the weather warms up. Short hair can be quick, easy, stylish and a great way to change up your aesthetic without shelling out for a whole new wardrobe. Whether you're thinking bob, choppy layers or even Emma Watson-inspired pixie cut, it can be a brilliant way to feel all-brand-new. However, if you've never had short hair before, it can be a big adjustment. Luckily for you, there are a few things you can do to make the transition a little easier and reduce your chances of ending up with a cut you don't ♥.

"Make sure you invest in key styling tools and products like salt spray, light styling gel and a good quality hairspray. A mini curling tong or iron is also great for smoothing out layers or adding texture."
