PIXIE Best bold cut

Cate Blanchett, Hayden Panettiere and Emma Watson (above) made their pixie-cut debuts this year, while Mia Wasikowska and Carey Mulligan took their short hair to the next level, making them shorter and choppier than ever before. 'The pixie cut is a very daring style – it's not for everyone! To pull off this look, you need very delicate, fine features – otherwise the look can be harsh and unflattering,' Joh says. 'The cut is crucial and the look requires texture and a bit of work to make sure it doesn't look too flat.'

24 Hour Body Finishing Spray $7.95 TRESemmé

LOB (LONG BOB) Hottest new style

Alexa Chung (above) was 2010's trendsetter, and her every move was embraced by fashionistas worldwide. So when Alexa cut her hair into a not-short-but-not-long length, the Lob was born – and a slew of celebs, like Olivia Palermo and Jessica Alba, were quick to follow suit. 'The great thing about this style is that it suits most faces. It is a flattering cut because it frames the face,' Joh says. 'This versatile style looks great sleek and straight – à la Gwyneth Paltrow – or gently curled.'

BALAYAGE Top colour trend

The almost-grown-out-looking hair colour technique known as balayage has been around throughout all of 2010, with stars like Lauren Conrad and Drew Barrymore (above) firm favourites of the look. 'Balayage provided a whole new way of colouring,' Joh says. 'It originally started with people looking for that natural, sun-kissed look, but has now evolved into more of a dipped style – with darker roots and lighter ends.' Joh predicts this colour evolution will continue into 2011, with the 'dipped style making way for other variations and more subtle styles'.
