Want waves but are confused about which wand does what? We've got you covered

SPHERICAL

With an even barrel size all the way along, you'll get 'a consistent curl and uniformity,' explains super-snipper Anthony Nader (rawhair.com.au). The best part is you can control where you want the curl. His advice? 'Just tong the mid-lengths to ends to get more of a textured movement.' If you're just starting out, stick to a larger barrel size. 'Mistakes will be less noticeable if the curl is looser,' advises Anthony.

CURLING GUARD

Heat-resistant guards are good to look out for if you're prone to burning your hands (guilty as charged) or if you simply need a little bit of practice in how best to wrap the hair around the tong. Like L plates for first-time curlers, these will help you to guide your hair around the barrel until you're confident to go it alone.

CONICAL

If you want your waves to look natural, this is the tool for you. 'The barrel is wide at one end and narrower at the other, which will provide more of a graduated cylinder curl,' says Anthony. 'It often looks more natural and unconstructed.' It also allows you to be versatile – if you want more defined curls, focus on the tapered tip; if you want looser, softer waves, wrap hair around the larger base.

TRIPLE BARREL

'Twin and triple barrel tongs give more of a ripple [think: mermaid] effect,' Anthony says. 'These tongs give the hair more definition as the plate is a definite shape versus the regular tong.' If your hair is short, opt for a dual barrel tong, but those with longer hair looking to create mermaid waves will benefit, time-wise, from a triple barrel curler. Also, remember that the triple barrel creates looser ripples.

THE GAME-CHANGER

This patented number is revolutionising the way we curl. It takes all of the effort out of styling. Simply feed your hair through, program eight seconds for loose waves or 12 seconds for defined curls, and sit back to let the magic happen! Once it's done, depending on how curly you like your look, gently comb through with a cushion brush and voila! The gadget of 2013.
