Eva Longoria follows break-up rule No. 1: always look great.

LOVE HER LOOK

EVA LONGORIA

Ken Paves is Eva Longoria's mane man. Here, he reveals how to get out of any hairy situation.

1 Fake a salon-only blowout.

"Definitely use Velcro rollers! Add a few rollers to semi-dried hair around the face and at the crown to achieve a professional look. This will also smooth out your waves without tiring your arms, the way a blowdryer would."

2 Avoid damage.

"To keep curls healthy when styled straight, apply a deep-conditioning mask for 15–20 minutes. The steam will penetrate strands more thoroughly. If you are going to use a blowdryer, let hair dry more than halfway, so there's less heat directed onto your hair."

3 Give fine hair a boost.

"First, look for a sulfate-free shampoo that won't weigh hair down. Next, use a texturising spray on air-dried hair; this will enhance your natural texture while giving it some body. Lastly, you can always turn to extensions, which add overall volume by simply clipping in some pieces."

TREND ALERT

SEXY WAVES

"Create polish by adding definition," says Neil Weisberg, owner of the Neil George salon in Beverly Hills. "If your hair is straight or wavy, dry it, then use a curling iron on random sections. If you're curly, flat-iron some sections into a looser shape."

1. Redken Aerate 08, $28.95 (1300 650 170)
2. BabyBlissPRO Ceramic Curling Iron, $87.95 (1800 251 215)
3. Tresemme Volume and Lift Mousse, $7.95 (1800 623 540)

FAKE IT

No need for eyelash extensions when you wield this bad boy. Maybelline New York's The Falsies Volume Express Mascara has a souped-up brush to deliver a lash-boosting formula of kerafiber. Go on—who can resist a bad boy! $19.25; 1300 369 327.

PACK HEAT

When you're on holiday, even the swankiest of hotels has the most dismal blowdryers on offer. Pack your own heat with Parlux's 3200 Compact Dryer ($154.95; 1800 251 215). Parlux is the Ferrari of blowdryers so it will be a savvy investment.

Kate Bosworth is on red alert.

CODE RED

Kate Bosworth's makeup artist, Kate Lee, shares her steps for a perfect red pout:

DRAW THE LINE First line lips with a pencil that matches your natural lip colour, rather than a red one, says Lee. This outline will serve as a guide when putting on lipstick and will also prevent feathering. For a precise application, use a lip brush to apply lipstick.
