BEAUTY TALK WITH

MARIO
DEDIVANOVIC

Kim Kardashian West's makeup artist and judge of TV's 'Glam Masters' shares makeup secrets

ON WORKING WITH KIM ...
"She's always had a lot of trust in me when it comes to creating the makeup looks and it's pretty much always remained like that, when we discuss it and on the day that we start working, but we typically don't plan the makeup looks beforehand and I typically come up with it on the spot."

THE NEXT BIG THING ...

"The next big thing will be the collab with Kim and I, we worked super hard on it and it's going to be super fun. We're going to see some new trends coming out of that as well, in terms of just colours and things that I can't really say much about ... We're going to keep seeing new trends, like on the eyebrows—people think they're ridiculous but I think it keeps it fun and interesting."

RUNWAY TO EVERYDAY ...

"It's kind of like the same way that you do with clothing, you know, when someone sees a runway look with clothes they think, 'Oh my god, that's impossible—you can't wear it.' But you're not supposed to wear it exactly the way it's meant on the runway, you can maybe take one piece of it and work it to your own wardrobe. I feel that translates the same with makeup. If you see a crazy eye or you see an extremely metallic lip, you take one element of that and work it into your own look and make it work for you."

FLAWLESS FOUNDATION

"I like to match the neck usually when I'm working with my clients because the neck is always different. Neck and shoulders are always sort of a different colour, so I kind of like to match the neck and then apply a sheer layer of it all over the skin. I try not to apply it towards the edges of the face, I like to apply it more towards the centre. Not so much on the nose, kind of on the cheek, and then spread it upwards and outwards."
